Certified Horsemanship Association to Feature CHA President Peggy Adams and CHA Clinician Aimee Canterbury on Its April Episode of Horses in the Morning Radio Show

(April 2016) – As the third Tuesday of April approaches, the Certified Horsemanship Association is excited for an extra-special guest to be on CHA’s segment of the Horses in the Morning Radio Show. CHA President Peggy Adams and CHA Clinician Aimee Canterbury will be this month’s guests. They will speak live on air at 9 a.m. Eastern Time on Tuesday, April 19, 2016, with CHA’s CEO Christy Landwehr and Glenn the Geek, founder of Horses in the Morning. Those who can’t listen live can catch the recorded version afterward. The April show topic is “How to Choose a Camp and Instructor.” As always, the show is sure to be engaging and enlightening as hosts and guests provide entertainment, education, and takeaways for the audience. Please join us live or check out the recorded audio file on iTunes, HorsesintheMorning.com, or through the Horse Radio Network mobile phone app.

Adams describes the segment for potential listeners. “Are you looking for a riding instructor for yourself or your child?” asks Adams. “Tune into Horses in The Morning to learn tips and tools for selecting the best instructor to help you reach your riding goals. Which type of lesson program is best for you? Explore private lessons, group lessons, or summer camp lesson programs.”

Canterbury encourages anyone interested in the topic to tune in. “Horseback riding at summer camp is an amazing way to introduce your child to horseback riding or greatly improve their existing horseback riding skills,” said Canterbury. “There are a lot of things to take into consideration when selecting the right camp for your child.”

Peggy Adams is a lifelong horsewoman who is now retired from a career as a riding instructor at her farm, PLA HorsePlay. Even during retirement, Adams remains active with CHA as a CHA Master Instructor, CHA Clinic Staff, a Certified Overnight Guide, and through her various roles on the CHA Board of Directors for nearly a decade. Adams will share her knowledge with listeners from her experiences with CHA and from her work for more than 25 years as a camp director, riding director, and camp administrator. Prior to opening her own riding academy, Adams worked for almost three decades with the national Girl Scout organization in various managerial roles. She was instrumental in starting three large year-round equine programs, including fundraising, design, and construction of facilities. Adams believes that riders of all abilities and backgrounds should have access to quality experiences with horses. Even before she took on the role of CHA President in 2015, Adams embraced CHA's instructor certification program by requiring all instructors under her supervision to become certified with CHA. Adams and her husband, Bill, live in Greensboro, GA, with their three dogs.

Aimee Canterbury of Cloudland, GA, is a CHA Clinic Instructor and a CHA Master Instructor in English and Western. In 2013, she became the Program Coordinator at Camp Adahi, which is the home of the Girl Scouts of Southern Appalachians Horseback Program located in Menlo, GA. Before that, Canterbury was the farm manager for Chalakee Ranch in Guntersville, AL, and the Program Manager/Camp Director for the Girl Scouts of North Central Alabama. She also served Wesleyan College as the Community Horseback Program Director. Canterbury studied Animal Science at Auburn University. She is also a member of the American Camp Association, and she is a Standards Instructor, Lead Accreditation Site Visitor, and has served on the Local Council of Leaders. She is also an archery instructor, riflery instructor, canoe instructor, and an Anti-Bullying Facilitator with the Girl Scout's Power Up Bully Prevention Program.
